The State of West Virginia has never properly appreciated the need of a law to foster a military account.

foster a military organization, and, in that theirs is as much a party as any of consequence, is several paces behind her sister States in this particular class of enterprise. Some weeks ago the INTELLI-set of much right to have a party as any other enterprise. Some weeks ago the INTELLI-set of much. All this is true. But Repub-GENCER published an elaborate discussion licans do not adopt with regard to the of the question, written by Hon. L. G. of the question, written by Hon. L. G. Bennington, then a lieutenant of one of the Bitchie county companies and lately Mr. Carskadon. What would be thought the Ritchie county companies, and lately of them if they were to make the Demo honored by President Cleveland with an oratic party their own and nominate appointment in the Consular service. In that article, Lieut. Bennington quoted from Adjutant General Woods' report as Democratic party?

"It cannot be expected that a thoroughly efficient militia organization can exist, dependent for support upon the resources of individual members and contributions by public spirited citizens. It will not be claimed that the State has a weld disciplined soldiery; but the force it had up to the past few months was creditable to the sale and that party has not since the past few months was creditable to the sale and that party has not since the sale few months was creditable to the sale and that party has not since the sale and t self-sacrificing patriotism of the militia-men, and at the same time an evidence of the need of legislation upon the subject.

"It may seem superfluous to urge on the attention of thinking menths importance of maintaining a militia organization but, in the light of experience, I deem no suggestion I can make touching this sub-suggestion I can make touching this subject, too strong.

"The regular army of the United States is small. In case of invasion or insurrection the Government has to rely on volunteers. The best school for forming soldiers, and the surest bulwark of defense in a Government like ours, is in the millitary establishments of the States. The ablest and most experienced officers of the United States army, as well as most of our wisest statesmen, have of late years done all in their power to encourage volunteer State organizations,"

To which Lieut, Bennington added the following: following:

"Those interested in the military affairs of West Virginia, and those who have a pride for the State, should do everything legitimate within their power toward socuring a statute that tends to maintain the peace and dignity of the country, securing under authority of the federal constitution that recognized principle of government that a well armed and regulated militia is necessary to the security of a State."

a State." Governor Wilson has on more than on occasion expressed himself as being in full sympathy with the efforts of th who advocate the enactment of such a law as is above referred to, and there is reason to believe that he will make such a recommendation in his next message to the Legislature. House Bill No. 65, which was before the Legislature at its last session, if it had passed, would have been a good law, providing for the reorganization of the militis, State annual encampments, rations, forage and pay for troops while in camp; also

If West Virginia had six hundred men the State would be entitled to its share of the National appropriation, which would be something near $5,000 per annum. This would be a great help to the State, and with some additional approprietions, would maintain at least two regiments ready for service at all times.

During the past few months there has been witnessed in the State a revival of the military spirit among the young men, and despite the lack of encouragement in the shape of fostering laws, companies have been organized in several counties.

They are all self-supporting.

Within two weeks it has transpired to the state and the state and the state and taken of the coming campaign. "The Virginians are protectionists and getting more thoroughly that way every day. There are several Southern States where we are in a fair way of success, but this is especially true of Virginia."

"What other Sta es?" I asked.

"Oh, North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee, and, if they nominate Goff, West Virginia, sure."

"Goff?"

Within two weeks it has transpired that the Governor has considered it necessary to call upon this self-supporting militis to aid in the suppression of laweseness. How cheerfully they responded to the call is a matter of record-sev-

What it shows.

The fact that 1,500 fires out of 2,415, which occurred in New York city last year, were extinguished by buckets of water, shows the good resulting from watchfulness on the part of owners and tenants of property, employes of stores and manufacturing establishments. It also illustrates the propriety of keeping buckets full of water always at hand in the latter places.
